Mike is the senior vice president of Tax Law. He joined The Hartford on November 18, 2008. He spent his legal career both in public and private sector roles. Most recently, he was the Director of the Office of Professional Responsibility at the Internal Revenue Service (IRS). In this role, he helped to build out an organization that sets the ethical standards and regulates the professionals who practice before the IRS. Earlier in his IRS career, he headed the Office of Taxpayer Burden Reduction where he and his team were responsible for identifying and implementing ways to significantly reduce taxpayer burden.

Michael spent 25 years working for The Prudential during which he headed the tax, employee benefits, real estate and human resources sections of the law department as well as two plus years as the head of the Office of Strategic Planning. In the late 1990's, Michael co-chaired Prudential's demutualization task force and was a critical player in its successful corporate transition. He also had significant experience working on international tax law issues in Japan and the UK while at The Prudential.

Mike is a graduate of Yale University and the University of Virginia School of Law .